

Chikondi Thole is an Urban and Regional Planner by profession. Her research interest in area of Tourism Development Planning began in 2006 with a “Regional Development Plan for the Tourism Sector of Zambia’s Northern Province”. Her research and subsequent publication in 2013 have contributed to Mpulungu District’s tourism development plan. Her Master of Science thesis from Glasgow University’s Economics and Business School, examined the role of Planning Authorities in promoting tourism businesses in Lake District National Park.

Mrs Thole’s current doctoral research under the NORHED Project investigates the reasons for the varied performance of the tourism sector in Kafue and South Luangwa National Parks. This study provides an in-depth analysis of the various factors that support or hinder tourism development in Zambia’s national parks.
